

ABSTRACT

The present invention provides a method for controlling the dispensing of at least one serving from a dispensing apparatus by entering identification information about a user, putting a dispensing apparatus in a ready state based on the identification information, entering first dispensing information about at least one serving, storing the first dispensing information in a storage medium, linking the first dispensing information with destination information, activating the readied dispensing apparatus based on the first dispensing information to put the dispensing apparatus in an activated state, and dispensing at least one serving from the activated dispensing apparatus based on the first dispensing information.